Dr. Heather Johnstone, Event Director, said, "We are extremely proud to have been serving the ASEAN, as well as the wider Asian power industry, for a quarter of a century, and we look forward to continuing to serve by providing a forum where the industry's wants and needs, in terms of both strategic market thinking and the latest technological advances, are met."

"As Thailand is establishing itself as a central energy hub in the ASEAN, and Asia is also stepping up efforts to decarbonize how it produces its electricity, I believe that opportunities provided by Asia Power Week will help Thailand and the wider Asian region to become a true low-carbon energy leader in the near future."

This year, Asia Power Week has gained the participation and support of various influential Thai power industry players such as the Electricity Generating Authority of Thailand (EGAT), in addition to the Energy Policy and Planning Office (EPPO), EGCO, RATCH, BCPG, Provincial Electricity Authority (PEA), Metropolitan Electricity Authority (MEA), the Energy Regulatory Commission (OERC) and Thailand Convention & Exhibition Bureau (TCEB).

Kornrasit Pakchotanon, Governor of EGAT, said "We are glad that Asia Power Week has returned to Thailand once again together with the celebration of its 25th anniversary. Asia Power Week is a great platform for everyone to not only learn and share the latest innovations and inspiring experiences but also to strengthen global connections regarding the business of power generation and energy management. EGAT believes the Asia Power Week 2017 will be a promising opportunity for all participants to communicate, brainstorm innovative ideas and generate significant solutions to global power issues".

In addition, Asia Power Week is offering specific workshops on the efficient and effective management of carbon emission and the challenges or risks faced in developing a secure and affordable gas market in Asia.

Asia Power Week is also introducing a new easy-to-use Business-Matching Service, called hubsCONNECT, which will help attendees connect and meet with the people they wish to do business with.

Complemented by technical tours, multiple networking receptions, panel discussions, and many learning and business opportunities, Asia Power Week is one of the most comprehensive power industry events to attend this year.
